

STRENGTHEN SOCIAL SECURITY

...don't cut it.

Polling Memo: Americans' Views on Social Security

Public Policy Polling: "Voters strongly oppose, concerned about possible Republican changes to Social Security"

September 2016

- 88 percent of voters are opposed to cuts to Social Security benefits and 80 percent of voters would be less inclined to vote for a candidate who wanted to cut Social Security benefits.
- 68 percent of voters are opposed to privatizing Social Security by investing benefits in the stock market and 63 percent of voters say they would be less inclined to vote for a candidate who supports privatization.
- 62 percent of voters oppose raising the retirement age and 58 percent of voters are less inclined to vote for a candidate who wanted to raise the retirement age.

Voters refers to surveyed registered voters in Florida, Nevada, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin

Gallup: "Social Security Historical Trends"

April 2016

- 51 percent of Americans would choose raising taxes as a method to strengthen Social Security.
- 63 percent of Americans believe it would be a bad idea to raise the retirement age for those under 55 in order to address concerns with Social Security.
- 67 percent of Americans believe requiring high income workers to pay Social Security taxes on all of their wages is a good idea.
- 57 percent of Americans believe that reducing benefits for people who are currently under 55 is a bad idea.

AARP: "Social Security 80th Anniversary Survey Report, Public Opinion Trends"

August 2015

- 61 percent of Americans believe the average monthly retiree benefit of $1,322 for 2015 is too low.
- Majorities of all ages agree that it is beneficial to pay more into Social Security now in order to protect benefits for future generations.

Gallup: New Polling on Social Security

August 2015

- 57 percent of Americans prefer a raise in Social Security taxes rather than a cut in benefits to ensure long-term solvency of the program.

SSW: "Iowa and New Hampshire Voters Strongly Favor Protecting Social Security Benefits"

August 2015

A majority of voters in New Hampshire and Iowa would vote against a candidate who proposed cutting or reducing Social Security benefits.

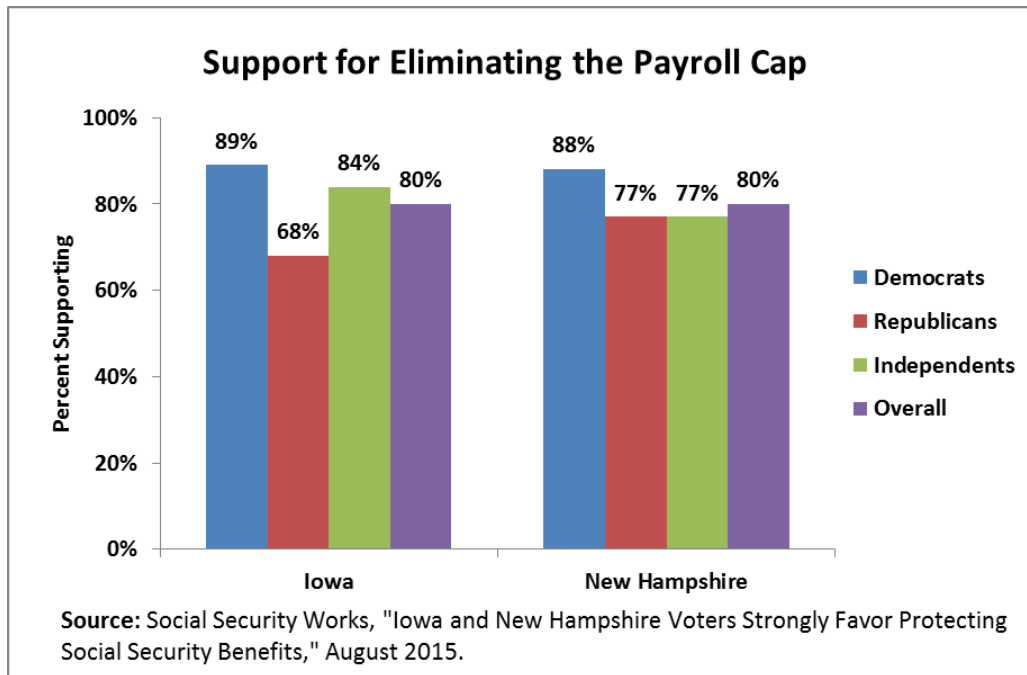

- 63 percent of Iowa voters say they would be less likely to vote for a candidate who proposed cutting or reducing Social Security benefits.
- 71 percent of voters from New Hampshire would be less likely to vote for a candidate who proposed cutting or reducing Social Security benefits.

A strong majority of New Hampshire and Iowa voters would support a candidate whose campaign platform protected Social Security benefits.

- 80 percent of Iowa and New Hampshire voters say they would be more likely to vote for a candidate who proposed protecting our Social Security benefits.

Over three-quarters of voters in Iowa and New Hampshire believe that the payroll tax dedicated to Social Security should be equally applied to everyone regardless of income.

- 77 percent of voters in New Hampshire and 76 percent of voters in Iowa believe that Congress should make millionaires and billionaires pay the same rate on all of their income, by eliminating the maximum taxable wage base and applying it to earned and invested income.

National Institute on Retirement Security: "Retirement Security 2015: Roadmap for Policy Makers"

March 2015

- 69 percent of Americans oppose cutting spending when it comes to reducing Social Security benefits for future generations
- 73 percent of Americans oppose cutting benefits for current retirees and 53 percent strongly oppose cutting benefits for current retirees

NASI: "Americans Make Hard Choices on Social Security"

October 2014

- 86 percent of Americans agree that Social Security benefits do not provide enough income for retirees.
- 72 percent of Americans agree we should consider raising Social Security benefits in order to provide a secure retirement for working Americans.
- 85 percent of Americans believe that Social Security benefits are now more important than ever.
- 81 percent of Americans don't mind paying Social Security taxes because they provide stability and security to millions.
- 72 percent of Americans think we should consider increasing Social Security benefits.

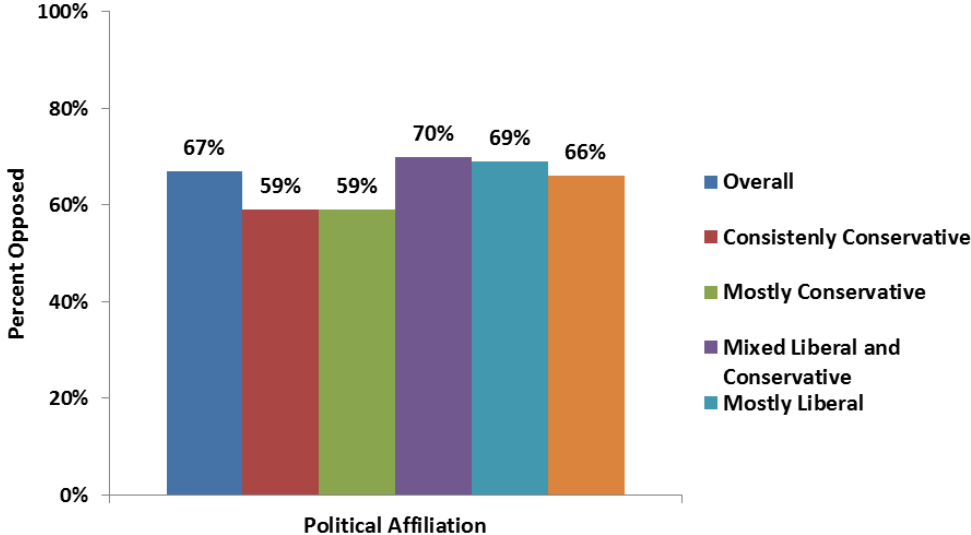

- 55 percent of Americans believed that the average Social Security disability benefit in January 2014 ($1,146) was too low.
- 77 percent of working Americans would pay more to preserve Social Security benefits.
- 83 percent of top earners would pay more to preserve Social Security benefits.
- 71 percent would prefer a package of changes that increases Social Security revenues, pays for benefit improvements, and eliminates the projected financing gap.

PEW: "Political Polarization in the American Public"

June 2014

- Despite overwhelming polarization on most issues, 67 percent of Americans don't think Social Security cuts should be an option.

Americans' Opposition to Social Security Cuts

Source: Pew Research Center, "Political Polarization in the American Public," June 12, 2014.